

The Jaguar Tribe

The Jaguar tribe, live in the Amazon rainforest which is in South America. They don't have roads or cars in the rainforest instead they walk everywhere and use their own made boats on the rivers and lakes boats to move around. The jaguar tribe eat mostly fish and monkey's.

HUNTING

The men go hunting naked at dusk as this is the best time.

When hunting they find and distract the monkeys by rustling leaves and making animal/monkey noises so they are an easy target when shooting them. They use blow pipes to shoot the monkeys. Before going out to hunt they prepare the darts which are covered in a poisonous root of a plant which when shot into the monkey it will soon (after 10 seconds) suffocate them and then they slowly die.

When the men return the women cook the monkeys and all of it is eaten including the bones as they have no way of keeping food for long.

If hunting is not successful then they do fish in shallow water. The women make the nets and they poison the water for a short while so the fish die. They store the fish in banana leaves.

They also sell wood to the timber merchants too by cutting the trees down with axes. They also make and sell some boats sometimes even their crops.

Beth Sims 6CK